

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Larva flies

Re: Larva flies

Author: : outsider

Date: : 2013/3/21 21:04:46

URL:

Quote:

mike_richardson wrote:

Becker,

Can you tie that in all red, with red bead also. A few guys in chester county are slamming them on my all red killer. Been getting pictures sent of the DHALO and fly project stockies left and right. Not sure if there are blood worms out there or what but the all red is working.

I never go to try the all red version yet. He said 2 suckers ate them as well. Weird. I typically only get rainbows on that pattern. Just got a picture of really nice brown on it as well.

"red thread" flies like a red Zebra midge are commonly used, and they do catch fish. There is a larva that they immitate, look it up on the web. Tie them very thin, on caddis hooks. Sometimes I use thread (ribbed, then coated with head cement). I also use red Spanflex - great material to tie with, and durable as it has fibers running through it lengthwise.