

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : bead head egg

bead head egg

Author: : azjackstraw

Date: : 2013/3/22 1:41:31

URL:

Friends of mine were on Elk last weekend, did well on eggs, small orange an yellow. One of them, that I fish with a bit in Erie, said that he noticed he had a quite a few refusals. He fishes an egg, or egg pattern, with a dropper line from the bend, then places a small shot on that. I've used this rig and seen it work, but I as well, have seen refusals. I'm not sure if they hit the dropper line with the shot on it and turn or some other reason. I'm wondering, will a copper bead above an egg turn them off? Or am I gonna be playing snag the bottom on every cast? Any one have similar experience? I leave in 34hrs 7 minutes and some seconds, not that I'm counting!