

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : So they're not closing...

Re: So they're not closing...

Author: : Paraleptalata

Date: : 2013/3/22 22:31:05

URL:

I usually try not to get involved in debate but here it goes. The above article once again shows that the Commission is more concerned about keeping it's good standing in the community at large than doing what is economically and environmentally right. The entire system of stocking trout is antiquated to say the least. I know stock trout are necessary in some waters but mostly only in waters that cannot support trout. What's wrong with warmwater species anyways. I think smallies and rock bass are pretty cool. The PFBC does some really good things but their mindset is stuck in 1955. Not that there was anything wrong with 1955 but it's time to move on. They need to educate the public and really get educated themselves. I am sorry some jobs will be lost and others will have to relocate if hatcheries close down, but it is about time we stopped this madness. True sustainability lies with wild fish and anglers who admire their wildness. Thanks.

PARA