No one that replied to this thread put Gierach's fishing up on a pedestal or said they want to mimic his fishing (well, at least not that I saw, I didn't go back and re-read it). Instead, people went out of their way to say they read him for his entertaining writing and not for instruction.

Steves point may not fit in well with the rest of the thread, but that does not make it invalid and I happen to agree with it. Gierach is a good writer. But just because he writes about a place or experience, it does not make him expert.

Also, my reply was in regard to fly fishing literature and the general attitude anglers have toward the authors. It was not limited, nor was it directed at Gierach.
