Suggestions I ask for for ..... and suggestions I got! That is one of the great benefits IMO of this forum and the wealth of information that folks are willing to share. I took the suggestion from FI on one of the original replies on this thread and went back to the vise. I thought that natural rabbit strips would be the answer for the material for the claws. I tied one with natural rabbit and my son looked at it and said he thought there was too much contrast between the claws and the body. He asked if I had any darker rabbit strips. I happened to have both black and an assortment of olive ones. Here is the result of the natural vs. the olive rabbit strip claws with the rest of the pattern the same as my original one. Personally, I think the olive is a really good look. Man, I can't wait to fish them! Thanks for all the replies.
