Well, you lacked dries/duns in that size, but had an emerger. Then it floated "too high"? Sounds to me like it'd be just fine as a dun imitation?

Of course, if they were taking emergers instead of dries, well, then you want it lower in the film.

In order of importance:

1. Presentation/drag
  2. how high it floats - match what they're taking. If duns, you want it on top. If emergers, you want it in the film. etc.
  3. Size
- these three are VERY important. Get em right, and you can do very well without having an "exact" imitation.
4. Shape
  5. Color (and even then, light or dark is usually sufficient rather than having to get the exact right shade).

Congrats on the milestone.
