

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : So they're not closing...

Re: So they're not closing...

Author: : k-bob

Date: : 2013/3/25 11:11:43

URL:

A good example of the way fishermen may overestimate the harm to wild trout populations can be seen by looking at Cold Run in Schuylkill. I do wish that it was not stocked along the road there. But look at the cold run system in a terrain map, zoom it out. The two nice brookie streams to the north that form cold run? Remote, posted or both. The two nice brookie streams to the east and west that join cold run? Very remote, very small, some posting. Brutal ravine on the east. Stocking cold run along the road may suppress the number of wild trout there, but it hardly threatens the viability of wild trout in this stream system. And it may not even reduce the total number of wild trout in the system much at all...