I just happened yesterday to bump into Lively and PA Angler while researching the Paul Young Strawman. Salvelinus, I didn't know about that archive link; that's a gold mine.

I checked out his book at the Dauphin County library moons ago. I believe the inchworm was chartreuse deer hair lashed to a hook, with some extended body incorporating a bend purposefully. Not sure if foam was well known at the time he wrote the book. If I tied any I lost them and doubt I ever gave them a fair test.
