One of his flies that he featured in a PA angler article, was a mayfly pattern called a tri-point dun. It's a more realistic variation of the comparadun.

The deer hair is separated into 3 different segments. 2 parts are bunched separately on each side of the front of the hook - and represent the legs, and help float the fly.

The 3rd part sits on the top of the hook, and squeezed together into a sailboat wing shape. Then glued to hold it that way.

It's a very effective pattern - and has caught some fish for me, that have refused everything else that I tried
