albatross i'm with you. never have much luck with streamers. I also rarely tie one on. I do however get some strikes. i believe a lot of the strikes are at the tail or the head, but rarely the hook meets the fish's mouth. From what I've read, a predatory fish will attack a bait fish at the head/eyes, or try to disable it by hitting the spine. So now when I tie my buggers, I add bead-chain eyes. But my confidences isn't their to try 1.
