I competitive fly fish and I just so happen to be highly active in TU on a local and state level. I would actually say that many competitive anglers are more interested in conserving and protecting the streams than a good majority of anglers out there.

I totally understand its not for everyone but really what gives many of you the right to judge and demonize it to some extent. At one time I was actually much closer to the dead against stance but once I looked into it and got a better understanding of what is involved I truely grew to appreciate what it is about and how it has improved me as an angler and conservationist.

As far as comments about czech nymphing and pinning are you for real? What the heck do you think an indicator is that really is pinning with a fly rod much more so than any tight line nymphing is. But I dont care how you fish as long as you enjoy it. Bait, lures, dries its all just fishing and we all do what we consider enjoyable. I do urge you to learn more about whats involved with the competitions before you are quick to judge.
