I wouldn't say never. I have a very experienced friend who never uses attractor patterns (including flies with bead-heads) for wild trout. However, I haven't seen a huge difference. Besides, a bead may add extra weight to get the fly down to the bottom where a ton a wild fish hang-out.

I do find myself useing more realistic patterns (minus the bead) on the wild streams around me (Fishing Creek, Spring, Slate run).

I have also been told and read from reliable sources, that presentation is the main key to catching fish.

Sorry for all this gumble, hope it makes sense.
