Has anyone looked at the stress on the resource (fish bugs water streamside plants, etc), particularly in light of good streams where many comps are scheduled? Maybe each stream should have a limit on the number of comps in a given area.

Additionally, I get 1 Saturday a month to fish and if I drive a few hundred miles I would probably fish around these guys, wouldn't want to intentionally mess anyone up but by the same token my time is limited and I can't afford to stand around and wait/watch.
