Dryflyguy,

"Catskill type flies still catch many fish, and are well worth carrying IMO.

Wbranch - I'll row for beer!"

Yes, Catskill type flies have their place...just not in my fly boxes! just kidding. In swift, riffly, water I'd probably put on a hackled thorax dun which is just an aberation of a Catskill type fly. Move the wing back to almost mid point and clip the hackle on the bottom.

I also still like to tie divided woodduck wing Quill Gordons and other flies in that genre just because they look so pretty in my fly boxes.
