Note that Orvis only warranties finished rods - they do NOT warranty their blanks. I found this out the hard way - their warranty says "we will refund your money on any purchase that isn't 100% satisfactory. Any time, for any reason"

Well that isn't true regarding rod blanks even though I could not find rod blank mentioned at all on their warranty page. A broken superfine is not satisfactory to me (ferrule broke while playing a fish - 19" rainbow) .

Went up the chain of command to the head of the rod repair division and no one would honor that warranty on a rod blank - they will repair for $.

Also the $50 fees from other companies might as well be a repair charge - to me a warranty doesn't have an associated cost.

Handling fee? come on.
