
Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : GPS Fishing Guide

Re: GPS Fishing Guide

Author: : wbranch

Date: : 2013/3/27 15:43:39

URL:

Jack,

"It's the same, just different." Your a funny guy! It ain't the same but that's okay with me. I figure you young guys might need a little more help 'cause everything is so easy for you today. HeHe. Heck, I remember when Gladding used to sell tippet spools in various color holders so you could tell the difference between break strengths. Would you believe 6X had a break strength of 1.2# and 7X had a break strength of .6# That's the truth, no BS. I used to feel like a million bucks when I landed a 18" Montana trout on 6X.

pcray1231,

"I don't know of anyone who "just drove around". Well I did. I can vividly remember driving over the mountain from Roscoe to Pepacton looking for little creeks to fish or driving all along the old road beds of the lower EB and searching all along the main stem on rural roads looking for access.

That is how I found many of my favorite sections of the main stem. Look at a road map, see if there were any roads near the river, find a farmer and ask permission if I could park, or drive, onto his property to access the river.

Here is a picture of me and the rig I had back in the days when I would go hunting for new waters.

Attach file:

 My weekend home.jpg (92.60 KB)

