

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Steelhead rod

Re: Steelhead rod

Author: : wbranch

Date: : 2013/3/27 22:38:34

URL:

I have a Gatti 10' #7 but on my very first trip to the Cat, as I was walking to the river, I stepped into a puddle and the bottom was all clay. I slipped and fell and when I got up I noticed that I had jammed the rod tip forward and now it was a 9' 9" fly rod. That really ticked me off. That happened about eight years ago and I was so mad I took the rod apart, put it into the tube, and when I got home stuck it into the basement and haven't looked at it since.

Gatti's are very light rods I should probably just buy a new tip for the damn rod for $75 and save the difference for gas money to Erie.

Thanks for the info about a rod for sale on the Swap forum.