We seem to have a good grouping of streams so how about your favorite way and or fly to fish them.

For the Potomac in summer.....would be the evening popper bite. I like to get up on a car sized boulder with 360 view and double haul a pencil popper as far as I can and just strip it back fast. Sometimes you'll get multiple strikes in a single retrieve.

As I've mentioned more than once on this forum - in recent years it seems to me that this summer popper bite has diminished on all the rivers I fish and nowadays I get more bass with nymphs and streamers. A close second would be deep streamer fishing for pre-spawn bass in March/April (this year, the early bass season just doesn't seem to want to start).
