I don't like the trend that puts us on. Just my opinion.

You'll discover places that get packed, and places not so crowded. Then you'll adjust stocking numbers, and stock the packed places more, and the uncrowded places less. Which of course results in less people fishing the uncrowded waters, and more trying to stack into the already packed places.

Taken to the extreme, you end up with small areas that get loaded with fish and shoulder to shoulder fishing. Just a circus. Not exactly a good "family" atmosphere, nor is it good for getting future fishermen into the sport.

IMO, the goal should be to spread out the fish and the fishermen, and to highlight the areas which are underutilized.
