

---

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Lehigh River

Re: Lehigh River

Author: : RyanR

Date: : 2013/3/28 13:57:56

URL:

Exactly what Shane said: Olives, sulphurs, Isos & caddis. Also expect good hatches of hendricksons, march browns/grey fox, & various stoneflies. Joe DeMarkis is a great guide choice for the Lehigh.

As for timing the hatches on the Lehigh it's indeed best to be flexible and don't just plan to fish one hatch that day. Bring flies for several different hatches that might be occurring during that time. The fish will quickly tell you which hatch they're keying in on. Plus, the hatch you planned to fish might not be coming off great that day but another hatch is rocking and the fish are all over it. If you plan for several hatches you're still good to go. The other important thing for timing hatches on the Lehigh is to carry a handful of black woolly buggers! Some days on the river they're the only thing that works.

There are hatch charts available online from the Evening Hatch, also the LRSA site & Joe's site- Rivers Flyfishing.