

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Hendrickson Hatch

Re: Hendrickson Hatch

Author: : mcwillja

Date: : 2013/3/28 14:27:52

URL:

Quote:

wbranch wrote:

Mcwillja,

Is the wing of your Hendrickson dyed snowshoe rabbit? Nice twist on a very popular mayfly. I like it because it is surely different than many of the flies that are tied to closely resemble the appearance of the duns. Give them something a little different, yet still representative of the emerging life cycle, and you might have a killing pattern.

Yes it is dyed dark dun. This is my not so secret anymore pattern for the BK/Delaware. I believe the red head/eyes and blue rib make this pattern stand out among the million other patterns. I split the wing with a biot to make a batwing style emerger. It has also proven effective in CNY's Oatka creek which can have very selective feeding trout.