I went to the Vibram Soles with studs and found three advantages over felt.

1. Climbing up stream banks and hill sides is much safer not to mention when fishing below freezing your soles won't turn to ice on the walk out.
2. Hopping in and driving up or down stream without removing your waders is much less of a mess.
3. My wading shoes dry almost overnight which is the point but this also means I don't have to leave them sitting out in my garage for a week to dry.

So maybe some think that felt is far superior but I think that the Vibram soles have their positives as well as possibly preventing a catastrophe.
