

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Quill Gordon Nymph

Re: Quill Gordon Nymph

Author: : FrequentTyer

Date: : 2013/3/29 0:41:42

URL:

Are you familiar with the quill Gordon wet fly?

Tail: wood duck

Body: stripped peacock quill

Hackle: Dun hen tied in wet fly fashion

Wing: rolled wood duck tied slanting back over the body.

Google quill Gordon wet for plenty of pictures. As you probably know, they emerge on the bottom and swim to the surface in dun form. This pattern does a good job of looking something like that. Hares ear or march brown nymphs will probably do a reasonable job of mimicking the nymph itself, but if the hatch is on you might get more action with the wet fly pattern.

Mike.