pccray: A stream with good residency is an ideal one to float stock, meeting both your and my desires. The problem is that there are limited numbers of anglers willing to build float stocking boxes, tubs, or barrels and participate in the stockings. Anglers who desire to have the fish spread to a greater extent would benefit others and themselves by considering float stocking. I've even seen rubber rafts partially filled with water used for float stocking.

If anyone would like designs of the float stocking barrels that I have ripped off others and improved send me a pm. Works really well with low flows/shallow areas. These "boats" can easily be used by an individual versus the old wooden screen systems.
