

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : First fish on a homegrown nymph

Re: First fish on a homegrown nymph

Author: : dc410

Date: : 2013/3/29 12:37:32

URL:

That is a really great looking pattern. You could fish it up, fish it down, or across, dead drift, swing it, strip it (as long as it is in the water you'll be in business). Get that fly anywhere near a trout's feeding station or a current seam and they will be all over it. You will catch many, many more fish on that fly. Don't be sucked in by the desire to have to change something..... if it really produces it probably doesn't need changed. Nicely done!