Testudo.....As far as impact on fishing , trout eat 'em , i've seen this event 3 or 4 times and there are millions of them with half a million on the water. The nicest pattern i've ever seen was a woven body version , tied by that gal from the Netherlands Torill Korvu (sp?) They are a chunk of meat for a fish probably as much body mass as a crayfish , the last time it happened here locally , Bedford , there were several recipes in the paper for human consumption. I did not cook and eat any but apparently you can if you want.
