My biggest issue with furled leaders for me is when I yank out a snag, my leader recoils and has to be straightened.

Keep your rod low (even in the water) and pointed directly at the snag. Pull straight back until the tippet breaks. By keeping the line and leader along the surface of the water, the water will retard the recoil of the leader and you won't have a tangle.

This is a good idea for non furled leaders too, BTW.
