You can furl separate butt and mid sections (or as many sections) as you wish. You connect them loop to loop and that's easier than tying barrel or blood knots. They do not pick up and spray water any more than a knotted leader if they are tightly furled. The leaders that famously spray water and create a wake on the water are braided leaders. Every time I switch back to knotted or knotless tapered leaders (as when on a trip and I want to try something different) I end up cursing them and go back to furled.
