he is very quick and effecient with his knots. maybe because he ties on tippet of 4x then 5x to that with the blood that he doesnt induce so much drag.

i just find it weird that he has found the complete oppostie at least it'll give me something to observe over the next week

Also consider how much tippet he is using when nymphing deep. If he is tying on 4+ feet of tippet he is essentially tying on a level leader to the end of his furled leader. This is a workable rig, but again, I think it is more a matter of making something work rather than using the best approach for the situation.
