when nothing is coming up, buggers and such are great search patterns. And when I'm not catching anything on what I think I should be catching them on, a bugger will usually save the day. Its an invaluable fly. Major multi-tasker. I have fished it intentionally as: stonefly nymph, catterpillar, baitfish, crayfish and leech. While I do have much better luck with it from the float tube in lakes, I can't imagine being on a stream or river without some.
