Your position is the same as the "no stocking over wild fish" crowd.

I don't think that's true. Their view is basically that if it's on the natural reproduction list, it shouldn't be stocked. And that list includes not only classes A, B, and C, but also D and E. Our views differ on the lower end of this scale. Class E, low class D, etc. SHOULD be stocked, IMO.

And that's an awful lot of stream miles where we differ. Probably the majority of the stocked water in the state.

I'd certainly be happy with ending stocking on high Class D and above. And I think most other wild trout advocates would too. That would be a huge benefit to wild trout populations.

Class E means no wild trout.
