No leak yet on my Bean RR's, but a situation has developed which tampers my enthusiasm.

For a little background, I bought em last summer, so less than a year. And this was one of the lightest fishing years I've had. Probably a dozen outings or so total.

Last weekend I noticed a seam opening up pretty badly. I can stick my finger through it. Luckily, it's on the gravel guard, so is not a leak, per se. But it certainly has put a dent in my confidence in how "bulletproof" the wader is.

Bean has an excellent "satisfaction" warranty. I try to be fair with these things. I expect about 3 years at my current fishing pace before leakage. If it leaks before then I'll take them up on the warranty. If it lasts 3 years, I will call myself satisfied.
