Hmm, I guess i dont know where these "better places" are yet : ) It is unfortunate that this cold weather still has the smallmouth hunkered down, because that is what I have close to home.

I am not questioning the need for drawing the reservoir down etc, but my point was we have not had much rain so i was wondering what was attributing for the other 1,000-1,500 cfs of water compared to when i was there 3 weeks ago and the total flow was 1,200. Dam was probably running around 500 cfs then. Anyways, i appreciate the info and th elink.
