perfect fins all three - impossible to know but, they don't look like stockies to me.

You must have a different definition of perfect fins than me. Those fins are torn up. Not as bad as some stocked fish, but definitely not "perfect".

i meant tails. yeah i see the split fins but i assume thats from the fight and landing. if you look at the tails they don't look worn down.

anyhoo. i did some research and found that the last fish is definitely a sea run brown. i've seen evidence of others caught on the fly by walleye fishers on a central pa river.

and i know where too. probably not worth targeting them specifically, but hey what a by catch - that fish there would have been a PA State record. or any sea trout, the slot is vacant.
