

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Help with microfibets.

Re: Help with microfibets.

Author: : lv2nymph

Date: : 2013/4/6 19:56:43

URL:

Yes, they are slippery little devils aren't they? Are you putting a thread base on the hook before tying in the fibets? (this will help to keep them from slipping a little)Once tied in you can split them with the thread. Once you have the fibers tied in bring the thread up on the near side to you of the hook come up through the fibers wrap over and around the far side of the hook bring thread around and over to the far side of the hook and down through the tailing again then up and over. This will take some practice to master, take an evening and tie in just tails watch what you are doing and how the material reacts to how you work the thread. I hope I wrote this in a way it makes some sort of sense and you can get it, it's kind of difficult to explain much better to show.