Well the steelhead fishing has pretty much tapered off due to the cold temps and ice on the tribs. There are some anglers going out on the ice, and they are catching some steelies that way. Even though it is Feb 2nd it is still early ice. There are many reports of people going thru the ice, so use extreme caution and go out at your own risk. Some are saying the ice is 4 - 5 inches on Misery Bay and it is supposed to be colddddddd the next week with the high in the teens and lows in single digits at night. Please use EXTREME caution on the ice and fish at a place where the ice has been checked and proven to be thick enough. Hopefully if weather continues as it is you will be able to drop the bait and keep the fish.
