Mike,

I think the ability to match light conditions is key no matter if its fresh or salt. Sometimes its so bright out that dark lenses are a must. Copper seems to work well in most situations in the salt, but Today, just crusing around in the boat, I had dark lenses and my eyes were thankful for them. This past Nov. the overcast days made my copper lenses to dark for the creek in New York . I wished I had a rose or yellow pair as the browns were tough to see. Being able to switch lenses means I 'GG
