Be cautious of future development. Our family camp is currently condemned. Local development has required us to tap in to sewage. Our cabin is dry and it would require a pump station and a great distance of sewage lines. The cost of doing this would be astronomical, so we declined to hook up (We did pay the hook up fee though). Because of this, the township made us fill in the privy and we are forbidden from using the cabin structure for anything other than storage. Additionally, the small lake it sits on will be drained in 2015, if we, and the other cabin/home owners cannot come up with the $250k in dam repairs required by the EPA. Think about the future carefully before pulling the trigger on a cabin.
