I would say absolutely. If you have the dream and the drive go for it. When Im not up there I am daydreaming about being there.

It took us a year just to prepare the site hauling out the old junk and trash and dismantling an older falling down structure on the property. We had an amish crew bang out the shell and tin roofing in a weekend but it took us another 1 1/2 years to complete the inside plumbing electrical and finish work ourselves. We use a Sunmar composing toilet that works great, Its green, no septic and low environmental impact.

The simpler and more minimalist you keep it the better. It took alot of sweat equity and hard work but we did it and now enjoy it every chance we get. I dont regret a minute of it.
