We need the water brother! Fill em up! I think the Beaverkill went from around 350 cfs to almost 1800 cfs and it's still going up. They were just on the edge of a small band. Big stuff coming though. If the rain over Pittsburgh goes between State College and Corning region, that will be great. Get some more water back into the system. It's bad for opening day upstate but you expect high water in the spring. It looks like I could almost walk across the Susky in front of my house. That's normally 7-8' deep.
