I stopped at the Li'l Skuke north of Port Clinton earlier this week on the way home from work. The water temp was actually 58 degrees. All I could manage was one big fallfish. I haven't even seen a Smallmouth yet this year. I was in need of some action so I rounded out the day for about an hour or so at the Tully and smashed them stockies swinging wet flies. The early season smallmouth thing has been very frustrating to say the least, but I won't give up on 'em.
