JV,

Individuals do buy, give away, and trade stuff there. And at the raffle, there's usually "donations" (read, product placement). But no, it's not a commercial affair, it's a social event.

Just a bunch of guys who sort of know each other and agree to show up at a campground on the same weekend. We have a shared passion which unites us.

We do fish, by splitting off into smaller groups. But even the fishing is more socially oriented than it is about maximizing success. Overall, the social aspect is the priority all weekend. The way to think of it is a party. Lots of food, alcohol, conversation, guitars, etc.

You could look at it like woods party. If you aren't a country boy, a hippie party.
