Yes, and I can't understand why apparently so many cigarette smokers think the butts are not litter. They take longer to decompose than any paper products and I cant' tell you how many times I have found them in fish stomachs. If not discarded directly to the streams, they wash in via storm water. Based on the reaction of trout in Maine (recently released study on trout consuming discarded soft plastics in Maine lakes), it is likely that the butts consumed inhibit fish growth if they can't be passed.
