I will be honest. Here is some suggestions, things I would change.

Like SBecker pointed, ribbing is way too big for those nymphs in second row. Tails made of Hare's mask and pheasant are too thick and too long.

Nymphs with beads are so so, but the ones without are out of proportions. Thread heads made with whip finisher are too big and too long. Thorax in some nymphs are too thick and wingcase is crooked.

One more thing. After you tie your tail, try to make butt section as slim as possible, then build your nymph body slightly like cigar shape.

Those nymphs you have may be working on stocked fish, but I doubt you are going to be able to fool wild ones.

Not trying to be wise ass. Just trying to help.
