

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Pine/Kettle creek magic?

Re: Pine/Kettle creek magic?

Author: : David

Date: : 2013/4/13 9:51:34

URL:

Quote:

Squairetail wrote:

Thank you all. I just wanted to see if there was something I was missing. I have my own version of what you all described in Sullivan county. I certainly appreciated Pine and Kettle and the tribbs when I was there. Its just too far for what I recieved from it.

But then again, Im kinda spoiled in the area I live and the region I pass to get to the Pine/Kettle area.

Valid comments ST. It is relative to distance travelled / time spent. Living in western pa, the majority of my trips are to closer locales that offer top notch fishing. The trips to Pine / Kettle are reserved for those trips that I know I can spend a couple days there and will coincide with the hatches.