From the time they are built tunnels are always subject to collapse, but apparently this one is particularly bad, caution is advised. Being a RR enthusiast I've walked many tunnels and have seen cave-ins. If it should happen when you are in a tunnel, it could mean you'll never get out, even if it doesn't fall right on top of you. I know that tunnel is short and it's unlikely that you wouldn't have an avenue of escape, but it could happen. If DCNR says don't use it, then don't

You can detour around the tunnel and still make use of the trail.
