pKray.....right on the spot. I started out with the plan to fish the ATW downstream closer to the camp so i could keep a fire going and get some fishing in too. It was blown out high , not muddy but really up in the trees , so upstream i go , oh i forgot to mention 49 mike an hour wind gusts and a starting temp of 34 , well.....i had a very nice time up there , there were stoneflies and caddis (the little black ones) and the brookies jumped on them all day , about 7 hours total , minus lunch and some observation of a place that always has fry in it. I always check there just to make sure they are still there , and they were. Sounds like we had similar outings.....Way To Go!!!!!!
