Fished Conowingo tonight. Started at the mill in my kayak. The water was high, about 80,000 cfs. Only had 1-2 bumps in the kayak. There was a couple other guys in boats out. They weren't getting anything either, but the guys on shore were getting a steady pick. After striking out and battling the raging current for 3 hours I swallowed my pride, loaded up my kayak, drove up to fisherman's park, and fished from shore.

I immediately got into a steady pick of fish. It got progressively better while I was there and by the end of the night it was nearly every cast. I probably ended with a little shy of 50, all hicks, before I got hungry and tired of catching them. I landed a double on my last cast and figured that was a good note to call it day.
