Fished the Little Shenango today from 2-6, despite all the rain I figured I would give it a shot. Started at the old baseball field on Mercer street downstream from the College Ave. bridge and worked my way up. The water flow was much calmer then what it was Saturday, however still muddy and deep. Started with buggers and got nothing and continued to get nothing along the way. Met a few others along the way who were having the same results. Eventually I got myself to the access right behind Arby's where I took a break and switched to nymphs. Around 5:30 is when I finally got some action, netting 2 bows. Right when I was about to head out I got a snag, which I soon realized wasn't a snag, but instead a friggin carp. As big as he was, he didn't give that much of a fight and I ended up dragging him to shore. After that I figured it was enough action for one day.
