I'm with wbranch, but I am definitely in the minority. I see it as the instant gratification trend of America. It's more than a map thing, come on now guys. Be honest.

Show me where to go now, screw the line me 1st, fast foodification, twitter til I puke, get what you deserve, not what you earn. Our society is evolving and this is a small but meaningful sign that even how me chose where to fish is a reflection of.

I'm a paper guy. I like books, magazines, catalogs, maps, and it sounds crazy but I keep paper files of my bills and work stuff too.

Who knows, in 50 yrs, paper will be banned and computer/phone apps will be the only thing around.

To each is own. If your GPS gives you coordinates where I'm at, don't low/high hole me and it's all good.
